

Call for Proposals

Track Two Diplomacy Policy Brief Series

The Ottawa Dialogue is a university-based organization that brings together research and action in the field of dialogue and mediation. As a complement to its practice, the Ottawa Dialogue pursues a rich research agenda focused on conflict analysis, third party dialogue-based interventions, and best practices relating to “Track Two Diplomacy.”

One of our primary research outputs and opportunities for collaboration is our Policy Brief series. The Ottawa Dialogue Policy Briefs series is intended to stimulate discussion around key issues in the field of Track Two Diplomacy. These key issues have ranged from digital diplomacy, the role of Track Two in non-armed conflict, funding landscapes and local peace processes, and more.

The Ottawa Dialogue is now seeking proposals for our upcoming Policy Briefs. We ask those interested to keep in mind that this is not a call for academic articles, but rather for practice-oriented commentaries with clear recommendations for its intended audience. We encourage you to read our previous Policy Briefs to understand the formatting, tone, and what we have already covered.

Structure & Renumeration

Our Policy Briefs are 4000-6000 words. We normally publish three per year. All authors will received renumeration of 2000 CAD, paid upon receipt of a final draft. An email agreement with these details will be sent upon acceptance of a proposal.

Proposal Guidelines

Please send your proposals of no more than 250 words to od-info@uottawa.ca along with a brief biography. This is an ongoing call, however, proposals are reviewed on a rolling basis and we publish a limited amount of Briefs per year. As such, we encourage you to submit early. We are able to publish under pseunonyms for security reasons for authors.

We look forward to receiving your abstracts.

Dr. Peter Jones

Executive Director, the Ottawa Dialogue